

Beat the Dealer

Beat the Dealer is a popular saloon game from the old west, and Mississippi Riverboats. It is also known as “High Dice” and is a quick and simple game

It is also referred to as “The Bartender’s Game” often used to keep bar patrons occupied while they are visiting the bar.

The game is usually played with 3-6 Players, all betting that they can “Beat the Dealer.” All players get their bets down by placing their chip or chip stack clearly within the pass line area in front of them.

After all the bets are placed, the dealer sakes the two dice in the shaker, and rolls them into the dice tray.

If the dealers total is 2, all players win, and are paid EVEN MONEY. If the dealer’s total is 12, all players LOSE, and the dealer collects all bets.

If the dealer total is anything other than 2 or 12, (3-11) he places a puck or marker on the back line of the Design Lay Down, to indicate his score.

Player #1, to the Dealer’s far left, then rolls the dice into the tray. If his total is higher than the dealers, eh wins and is paid EVEN MONEY. If his total is the same or less than the Dealer’s, the player loses, and his chips are collected.

Player #2 then rolls the dice, and so on, until all players have rolled that round.

The Dealer’s advantage lies in the key rule, as stated on the Lay Down Area, “Dealer wins all ties.”
