PARTY & EVENT RENTAL

Ace - Deuce - Jack

At first glance, the player appears to have a great advantage in this game (10 to 3 in his favor), however this is not the case

Standard equipment includes the bunny board, and a regular deck of cards (Standard 52). The dealer calls out "All bets down" and the players place their chips in the Pass-Winner-Pass area of the lay down. They are betting to beat the dealer.

The deck is shuffled, and the dealer offers a cut to any of the players. If no player cuts, the dealer cuts. The dealer announces that "All Bets Stand," and then turns over the TOP THREE CARDS on the deck.

The dealer is betting that ONE of these three cars will be an Ace, Deuce, or a Jack. When this happens, the dealer wins and collects all bets. If none of these values appear in the three turned cards, ALL PLAYERS WIN, and all players are paid EVENT MONEY.

What makes this game so appealing to the players is the Dealer's bally-hoo, to the effect that "You get the other ten card values, and I'll only take the Ace, Deuce, and Jack. The dealer will win this game approximately 56% of the time.

If, after losing a portion of his bankroll, the player may seem to be ready to quit. The dealer can then suggest that the player pick out "Any three cards," for the dealer to hit...(Instead of the Ace, Deuce, or Jack) Dealer may say, "Okay, you pick 'em, tell me what three cards I have to hit, and I'll give you the other ten. Three markers or pucks are placed on the laydown back line to mark the new selections. Play then continues.

It really doesn't matter whether it's the Ace, Deuce, Jack; or any three cards. The dealer will always have the same percentage in his favor.
